My comments relate to middle and high school learning. For me it is essential that any virtual learning this fall emphasize classes that are actually taught as if the kids were showing up for class. I hope they will be working with a similar daily schedule, including attendance, and engaging with a teacher virtually to learn the curriculum. Along those lines, I would like to know what preparation, training or instruction teachers have received that will allow them to do their jobs effectively in this kind of environment. I have talked to a couple of teachers who indicated they have heard nothing from ACPS to date and i am wondering if there are plans to ensure they have what they need.
